This is the small, but fast Portable Genre Playlist Builder, which is the portable version of an exe editor with a tool for creating M3U playlists. Portable Genre Playlist Builder is a simple app that can be used to make M3U playlists. It works with mp3 audio files and it doesn't require to make entries in the Windows registry. You can simply double-click the.exe file to launch the app without any unnecessary setup. Portable Genre Playlist Builder supports up to a 100,000 songs and over 350 genre presets for you to pick from, which allow you to quickly create playlists. It doesn't require to buy extra commercial apps for making M3U playlists. It has also got many functions, like to listing, sorting, playing, and so on, which makes it very professional and useful. There are also no external memory required to create playlists. It can work offline too. Portable Genre Playlist Builder was reviewed by leo, a Android Freeware Examiner.

Q: Display appropriate error message if there is no output in Python I'm writing a little module to test a Telnet connection. It works just fine, but when I throw the exception, it doesn't give me the expected message.

Something like `print "Checking line " + str(test_lines.index(line)) + "... "`

try: while(len(send_data) len(send_data) - 1: send_data = send_data[:-1] print ("Test:

lunch for the good news and the bad.

And a victory for the good news. A few weeks ago, I was asked to visit the school their children attended as part of a food and refreshments event. I expected to offer yet more baked beans and crisps, but my task was to find meals to serve my four children – two boys and two girls – which would be healthy, nutritionally sound and a big hit with the adults there too. When I returned home the story of what I found changed our entire view of childhood food. Not one of the children was allowed a second helping of any of the seven meals on offer, and I'm ashamed to say I didn't eat more than a mouthful of any of them. The reason is quite simple: they were delicious. The children were not on a special diet, nor were they healthy. They were not children with high blood pressure or high cholesterol; they were children who were overweight and who would have had higher blood pressure or higher cholesterol if they had been on a diet. They would have, in fact, been described as being obese. But they did not feel poorly and they were not missing out on any food. What was on offer was a feast. I was surprised to find that children at this school have grown up on a diet of pasta and tomato sauce. They
