What is the reason for the move of the textfield element by Firebug? The form is submitted with the "Enter" key, but you can see that the "submit" event is not triggered until I press the "Enter" key a second time. Is there a problem with the DOM structure? Edit: A: It happens because you set the type as submit. A: What is the reason for the move of the textfield element by Firebug? When you press ENTER in an input (or a button) field, the control is sent to the server, and the browser (or whatever is handling the submit event) moves the text field out of the way so you don't accidently type in a value that would then be posted back to the server. You can stop this behavior by explicitly setting the attribute disabled to true or by using JavaScript/jQuery to simulate an actual submit by pressing ENTER or using a button. 09e8f5149f

What's New in the Strap?

Strap is an instant messenger and voice chat application that enables you to connect with other users from all around the world seamlessly. Comes with text, video and voice chat support While you may have the impression that you are dealing with an IM app at first glance, the truth is that the application includes much more options than that. For starters, the utility includes all the instant messenger features you would expect from a communication tool, meaning that you can make video calls, standard calls and chat with contacts in your list. It is necessary to mention that the app allows you to record your desktop or take snapshots that you can immediately share with your chat partner. As you probably hinted, you are required to have a compatible camera connected to your computer in order to take advantage of this feature. In addition, the tool enables you to send images, audio files and videos seamlessly. Then again, you should know that it works with only a few file formats, such as GIF, JPEG, PNG, MOV, MP4, MPEG, MP3 and WAV, to name a few. Could use more customization options While it does a fine job when it comes to chat and video conferences, the app does not allow too much customization. More precisely, you can only change your profile picture and the names of your contacts customization-wise. The utility does not allow you to change your status to invisible or busy, a feature that could come in handy when you are in a video conference with a potential customer, for instance. At the same time, the app could use a feature that enables you to hide offline contacts. Although it is true that you can use the search function in this sense, hiding offline contacts can save time and energy in the long run. An overall good tool for making calls In case you are looking for an intuitive app that can help you keep in touch with partners and friends from all around the world, Strap could be the tool to try out.
