Illustrator (see Figure 12-3) is a vector graphics program that is primarily used for drawing forms, symbols, and text. Illustrator can be used to edit raster images as well. Illustrator is mostly used by graphic designers who create logos, design brochures, and print ads. However, it is also used extensively by web designers who need to create graphic elements such as icons and buttons. **Figure 12-3:****

Illustrator is a good tool for web design. Illustrator can be used for web design. However, most web designers prefer to use InDesign for web design.

Illustrator has a powerful drawing and editing system that enables you to do amazing things with typography, text, and graphics. Illustrator is considered a professional tool, so it has many advanced features. Even so, beginners can work with Illustrator to a certain extent. Illustrator uses a path system for drawing that is similar to the way raster images are created. Illustrator uses paths to create rectangles, lines, text, and anything else that resembles a line, shape, or box. Unlike Photoshop, Illustrator has a programming language that enables you to program in if else loops, random numbers, and conditionals. ## InDesign If you have ever created a graphic design to be printed in a book, magazine, or brochure, you already know the basics of InDesign. InDesign has a drawing system that is similar to Illustrator but is a bit more powerful. You can use text, graphics, and shapes in a drawing in the same manner as in Illustrator. InDesign is a bit more powerful because it enables the user to create special effects and design objects that are native to the program (see Figure 12-4).

**Figure 12-4:** InDesign is similar to Illustrator and Photoshop in the way it enables you to modify and alter raster images. InDesign's special effects are called effects, and many of them can be applied to individual pages and entire books. InDesign can handle projects that can't be completed with Illustrator or Photoshop.

InDesign is best suited for people who design products,

Q: How to correct a timezone in PHP? I've got some working code in a script that reads in some time from text files. For some reason the locale is set to Brazil which is 4 hours behind US Pacific. `$us_time =`

strtotime("2000-01-01 12:00:00"); $brazil_time =
strtotime("2010-12-31
11:00:00"); $difference =
$us_time - $brazil_time; This works fine for now but I'm having a hell of a time trying to figure out how to make it work with the default of the server.

In the end I'd like to be able to have all my user's time locations in one timezone instead of having to switch them manually for every different server. Does anyone have any insight? A: Simple answer: Use the DateTime class. $us_date = new

---

DateTime("2000-01-01 12:00:00"); $brazil_date = new DateTime("2010-12-31
11:00:00"); $difference =
$us_date->diff($brazil_date);
You will want to format the date so you can compare it to the current date using the DateTime::format() method.

For example, if you wanted the date in a human-readable format, you could use `$difference->format('j.n.Y');`. It sounds like you are stuck using `strtotime()`, however, which is specifically designed for times. There is a new `DateTime()` class in the upcoming PHP 5.3

---

release that will make most of the things above much easier to accomplish. Amsterdam Plane

The Amsterdam plane (or Amsterdammaat) is the name for a type of Dutch wryneck.

The Amsterdam plane is a member of the tyrant flycatcher family (Tyrannidae), and is found in the northern half of the Netherlands (the Gelderland Province). It is found in forests and in open country at an altitude of between. The Amsterdam plane is a common species, with at least 1.6 million individuals. The Amsterdam plane is a medium-sized bird, measuring in length. The adult is mainly brown in colour with a white underside, a large white collar and a dark stripe on the neck. The wings

---

"I was, like, 'Whoa, this is pretty cool," Sarab said, according to CBS Rochester. "He said, 'I'm going to use it to try to get you married to me.'" The groom-to-be said he told Sarab he was looking for a way to meet people, CBS Rochester reported. He thought Sarab would be interested in a unique wedding proposal — not a proposal that involved roses, chocolate, a ring or any other traditional ways of saying "I love you." The "surprising" proposal worked. Sarab, who lives in Pennsylvania, said she is "absolutely" getting married to Bennet after the couple's first date. "He just came to pick me up and it was just, like, 'Oh, my gosh, this is too good to be true,'" she said of the moment she and Bennet met. "He just told me the whole story and I was, like, 'You know what? OK, I'm fine with this.'" Bennet had a similar reaction. "I said,

'Wow,'" Bennet told CBS Rochester. "The first time I saw her, I was like, 'Oh, I forgot I was single.'" He said his friends, who were also surprised by his proposal, thought he was crazy. "It's so crazy, like, I didn't know what to say," he said. "They were all like, 'How in the world are you doing this?' It's pretty crazy." Sarab said she wasn't upset when Bennet dropped the bombshell — and told CBS Rochester: "It was probably the best day of my life. I love him so much." The effects of benzodiazepines on the sleep of
