Search Threat

Analyzer By Comodo Security Team

Installers and scanners are often a hard combination to get right. Very often, they leave out important parts of the operation which can result in strange behaviors and fatal errors. That's not the case with Search Threat Analyzer from Comodo Security Team. You can think of it as a combined application installer and a portable threat scanner. The application installer installs the complete application as well as all the necessary components - such as the application's database, launch and registration programs. Search Threat Analyzer has a simple interface with four tabs. The main tab, "Check for Updates", contains the Scan Utility, which is the application's front-end for the scan and removal process. Three tabs below it show information about the current scan and detection results. The scan utility is a powerful search engine, with support for multiple protocols, such as HTTP, HTTPS, FTP, POP3 and IMAP. The program can also scan files and archives for malware, including archives packed with the UPX compression algorithm. These files can be compressed archives, as well as ext2 and ext3 archives. When the scan completes, you get an overview of the scan and removal process in the "Results" tab. The results come in the form of a list of malware files and folders, including file and folder paths. The malware files can be shown in an ASCII or Unix-like notation, and malware files can be examined in more detail for file extensions and characteristics. You can also inspect details about the detected malware and the files it infected. Why Use it? Scans are a huge task, and often too big to be carried out by normal users. Although you can use a VNC or Remote Desktop service to connect to your computer and run the scan, using Scan Threat Analyzer gives you more control, because you can choose whether to run the scan yourself or use a more powerful computer to do it for you. You can use Scan Threat Analyzer to perform several scans on the same machine, and it even keeps track of which scan has found which malware so you can see the results side-by-side. You can also export the scan results as a single file or as multiple files for different formats. Other features include a "Startup Guard" function that can be used to automate the process of creating system startup files. You can also easily configure your Antivirus program to quarantine or delete files that have been detected as malware. A final nice
