The original game The Graveyard was released in 2012. I found the idea and gameplay so compelling I returned in 2015 to expand on The Graveyard. I made the story more poignant, added a feature of death, and cleaned up and rewrote the code to make it more playable. Now, I'm making a new version of The Graveyard. This will be a free update in the original game, free of charge, and will be made available to all who purchased The Graveyard through my site: I think The Graveyard is a profound piece of work. I believe it has the potential to become an amazing interactive art piece. So, I hope you find this new version of The Graveyard as good as the first. What You Will Experience On first start the software will present you with a minimal intro and a list of starting options: Open: Opens the game window Close: Closes the game window Quit: Ends the application Help: Shows the help window Save: Saves the game Exit: Exit the application You will also see a menu bar at the top. This allows you to toggle the main features of the software: Show Graveyard: Enables or disables the Graveyard scene Show Options: Shows the options window Hide Graveyard: Hides the Graveyard Hide Options: Hides the options window Exit: Exits the application You can access the options window either through the menu bar or the Help button. You can also get here from the Graveyard scene via the menu bar and then the Enter button. What You Will Experience Some of the gameplay options available from the menu bar: Main Window: The main window will open in either a full screen or windowed view Option Window: A secondary window that allows you to set various options to your liking Options Window: Allows you to set various options to your liking What You Will Experience There are two main ways to play The Graveyard: 1. Tour: In this way you sit on a bench and listen to the story. 2. Explore: This gives you more options than tour. The visitor is able to roam the graveyard freely, and can investigate the various burial grounds, and

Latest content The Seafarers did not like the cruel and miserable life on land in the present era. And the Seafarers fell in love with nature and the sea, they were able to live in harmony with the waves and the salty air. That is where their ancestors once lived, but the Seafarers had became so cold and so tired to live in this mechanical regime. Hence they decided to leave it for their children. But there were already more people than the fruits of the seas. So they departed in search of new lands, on the cold, icy, humid and misty seas. Their coastlines were covered by thick forests, but the seafarers found no land to settle down and live by means of harvest. On the contrary, they were hunted down by ferocious beasts. In some places there were huge waves, in others underwater forests. Everything was a mystery to the Seafarers. Were their ocean a place of monsters, or a paradise? What kind of dangers were they subject to? Should they turn back or keep going? The Seafarers were going to return to their homeland without a goal or any particular place but they were not going to turn back until they had saved the children of their ancestors. What's new in FreeCell Solitaire Collection:

Alright, so those of you who played Deathtrap know that the "Power Moons" are purple. Why would I make them different colors? Well, besides the fact that I wanted to make them different enough so they wouldn't look the same, no one could tell that they were purple cubes if you didn't know that they were in my Black Moon Rising then. Same with the Dark Fireballs and Light Bubbles. They looked really weird in the original if you didn't know what they were; how they should look. The Fireballs are technically blue but it looks very dark brown. I was really proud of this one when I first came up with it, until I started thinking about how I should illustrate them. I know, down the road you'll probably be thankful for this now. The bubbles are, on the other hand, pretty hard to illustrate in the original. I decided to really darken up the cyan so that it'd be easy to see against the blue Moon. The purple? Well, that's just purple! They were pretty easy to draw but it wasn't the same dark purple that you see here so you'd better not see the original. I made the Moon partialy so that you can see the cubes better. I hope I didn't ruin the surprise by showing it here, but I think it is kind of obvious now that they're purple. Actually, you'd know what color they were if you were a hardcore geocaching player. The only way you could find out is to actually go out and read through the log files and go geocaching to see if you get to the right place. I saved my ideas for the Power Moons and Bubbles here, because I think they're especially cool now that they're differently colored. The same goes for the Trick-O-Tron; I wasn't going to do it in the original but it just makes the trailer much more interesting now.
