Acanthamoeba keratitis: diagnosis and therapeutic strategy. Acanthamoeba keratitis (AK) has become the second most common cause of microbial keratitis after Pseudomonas aeruginosa. The diagnosis of AK is based on clinical and microbiological criteria. Diagnostic techniques include culture of the corneal lesion, direct fluorescent antibody (DFA) assay, and molecular typing. The disease is usually self-limiting and treatment is not necessary if a necrotic lesion heals spontaneously. On the other hand, an abscessed lesion needs to be treated early to prevent progression to an ulcer and perforation. The difficulty of clinical diagnosis is great, with many patients being misdiagnosed. Therapeutic methods have not been well standardized, with the current recommendation being to treat any abscessed lesion with topical and subconjunctival antibiotic and corticosteroid therapy. Moreover, the use of antiretroviral therapy and antiviral therapy for the treatment of herpes simplex and herpes zoster has been proposed.Q: How to get parameters from URL using recursion in C I have a recursive function which receives a url parameter in the first round. Now I want to send a new parameter to the same function (recursively) whenever it receives an url. I have a function get_params that receives an url and returns url parameters as an array. Now from this function, I call another recursive function. Here is my URL from which I want to call recursively: I want to call the function "f" it received 'l' in the url. A: You can't (easily) pass parameters into a function call, so you'd have to implement some sort of mocking/faking, using recursion or non-recursion. I'd probably do it as a loop, but there are lots of possible ways to do it. int state = 1; // your url parameter while (state!= 0) { string url = getUrl(); if (url == some_url) { state = 2; } // Do some stuff...
