Join us today! I've been using Navicat for the past two years with great success. I always had excellent luck with it until I ran into a few issues recently. In short, Navicat Premium Essentials stopped running, and several of my databases have some annoying table issues that I can't seem to figure out. In short, Navicat is giving me a really hard time! The following troubleshooting didn't help: 1. Uninstalled the database, re-installed the database, and also made sure the Navicat preferences are in the appropriate location. 2. Installed Navicat on a different Mac (with a different account and user). 3. Modified the permissions, both in the default location and in each database I'm trying to open. Some of the issues I'm dealing with: 1. I can't open some databases anymore. The SQL file opens up in Navicat, but every table is in an unnamed, invalid table. It's as if the database is corrupt. 2. When I try to re-open a database that's giving me problems, Navicat can't connect. It says the connection is forbidden. Some of my databases are in MySQL, some are in PostgreSQL, some are in Oracle, and others are in SQL Server. Just one of them works right. I'd really like to get my other databases working again. Here are the versions of Navicat I have: Navicat Premium Essentials 5.1.1 This is what I get when I hit OK button in that errors window, though there is no popup window containing that errors. Can you please help in this situation as I am stuck with one of the databases and need to continue my work? I am using Mac OS X Mavericks and Navicat. I was deleting some databases in Navicat and I got that error.
