Taking a look at layers When you open Photoshop, you start at the topmost layer of an image. At the bottom of the Photoshop workspace you have a number of layers, the first of which is the background (also known as the default layer). When you click the New Layers button at the bottom of the Layers palette, you get a menu of choices, as shown in Figure 3-2. Click the Create a New Layer button to create a new layer. Layers are named with descriptive names and are numbered starting at 1. Figure 3-3 shows the Layers palette with a few selected Layers active. You can place different sized images on different layers, and then merge the images together on one layer. For example, you can take a selection of a landscape image that you want to place in a smaller border on a different layer, and then add elements of the selection to that layer.

Internet Internet Internet is the world's most popular form of communications and network. It is fast and cost-efficient. With internet technology you can connect almost everywhere in the world. Internet is faster, more secure and more reliable than a telephone. Information is transmitted via worldwide computer networks. Internet is also not a top-down model of organization but rather a bottom-up model of organization. This means that information and content is generated from a bottom-up approach. Internet was created in the seventies by the ARPANET. It was then the biggest network of its kind in the world. Today, the internet consists of more than 3,8 billion users in over 200 countries around the globe. Contents The internet started as a Network of ARPANET linked to ARPANET as the backbone and by academic institutions and others. A key observation was that an international network of universities could be set up in an efficient way, linking international universities to each other, improving scientific collaboration, and creating an international network of scientific communication. This type of network is called a world-wide-web and it was first implemented in 1981 at the University of California San Diego. Nowadays, the internet is used for many purposes. Some of these are: · Educational: · Studies · Research · Work · Mind control · Spying Many people want to know more about the internet and how they can use it for their own purpose. Some of these people are: · Researchers · People who want to be more connected · Politicians · People who like to keep themselves informed · People who want to keep their data safe · People who want to use it for their own reasons Internet can be used for many reasons. You can make money with it. You can protect yourself. A lot of people do their business through the internet and a lot of people use the internet for free. I hope that this list can help you understand more about the internet. Most older people are afraid that the government is spying on them through the internet. Even though the internet is an efficient means of communication and has great benefits, some people still claim that government might be spying on us using the internet. Most experts agree that if an individual user has nothing to hide, it is not a good idea to use the internet to spy on them. Since the internet is
