Invention The present invention relates to a test apparatus which is arranged to detect the flow of a fluid into a test cell so as to diagnose a fault in a flow path within the test cell. 2.

Description of the Prior Art According to the prior art, in order to detect the presence or absence of leakage of a fluid into a test cell, such as a fire engine, and to determine the amount of the leakage, a test cell which is provided with a plurality of test nozzles around its periphery and in which a fluid within a desired test range is induced to flow is arranged to be connected to a pump so that the fluid is caused to be entrained into the test cell. According to the prior art, a test cell pump of this type comprises a constant-pressure tank, a flow meter, and a valve to determine the manner of flow control. The test cell pump has a single door so that the operator can open and close the door. In accordance with a method which is known in the art, a heater is arranged to be connected in an induction loop. In accordance with a method which is known in the art, a heater is connected to a test cell so that the heater is arranged to be in the heating or cooling circuit of the test cell. In accordance with a method which is known in the art, the test cell is first closed by means of a test cell door to isolate the test cell from the outside and the test cell pump is started. A motor for driving the test cell pump is then energized to start the test cell pump, thereby starting the pumping of the test cell. The amount of fluid leakage into the test cell is a965df9bOren Wolkowitz

Oren Wolkowitz, Ph.D. is a theoretical physicist, writer, and Hebrew and English poet who specializes in the theories of both relativity and quantum field theory. He is a professor of physics at the University of New Hampshire.

He authored the book "On Living in a Quantum World" published by the Philadelphia HRS Press. In this book, Wolkowitz explored the concept of the 'quantum self' and its implications for our concept of personhood.

Wolkowitz was awarded a 2004 American Institute for the Advancement of Science's Berlin Prize for this work. Wolkowitz's interests include general relativity, quantum gravity, quantum electrodynamics, cosmology, the structure of the lepton masses, quantum entanglement, and the multiverse. In his 2009 book

"The Quantum Self", Wolkowitz explores the quantum-classical interface, by which he draws attention to the important role of consciousness as an emergent property of the quantum system. References
