Adobe Photoshop is a powerful image-editing and modifying software program that is used by millions of people around the world. It is used to enhance images, add effects, and modify those images. The tool is a great choice for professionals who are looking for a way to adjust their own photos. Adobe Photoshop started as a standalone tool, but it can now be used through the Creative Cloud monthly subscription plan. Adobe Photoshop with the Creative Cloud plan is convenient to use because it's all available on a shared network. Photoshop as a software alone would be too expensive. Adobe Photoshop is offered through different editions. The Standard edition is usually free of charge for personal use; while the Creative Cloud Photoshop features the "real" Adobe Photoshop, which is a paid edition. There are two types of Photoshop subscriptions: a yearly or monthly subscription. Adobe Photoshop

Elements is a version of Photoshop that's designed for simplicity. Photoshop Elements is designed for beginners, and it doesn't offer a lot of complex editing features. However, it does come with some of the features that were previously available only in the full edition of Photoshop. Photoshop Elements can be purchased, or you can get it through the subscription plan. It is very easy to use. It is not possible to use Photoshop Elements without a subscription. Adobe Lightroom is a photo-editing and organizing software that makes it easy to manage your images. It is used to create virtual albums, and it allows users to edit an image in a split screen view. A free version can be downloaded and used, and it's compatible with Windows, Mac OS, and even mobile devices. Lightroom is a program offered through the Creative Cloud subscription plan. Q: Extract all values from a dictionary using a string as key Let's say I have a dict like so: mydict = {'key 1': 42, 'key 2': 24, 'key 3': 20} and I have a list of keys: keys = ['key 1', 'key 2', 'key 3'] I want to extract all values from mydict given these keys. So I do something like this: for k in keys: mydict[k] This works fine, but then I want to do this in reverse. I want the keys (keys 2 and 3) from keys. How do I pull out this data from my dict? A: Just in case you need to do this later, I'd probably use a set of keys, and that will make it a lot easier to filter out bad keys: key_list = set(keys) mydict[key_list] Q: How can I debug MySQL statement affecting performance? I'm trying to debug a MySQL statement that impacts performance. This is for a personal project. I'm going to give a bit of detail and let you guys decide if I'm asking the wrong question. Here goes. Background I have a table of about 30 million records (active users) in MySQL. The table has one column (user_name) and four rows of serialized arrays (each row has 4 serialized objects in an array). I'm only getting data from a subset of the rows. There are two million that I'm interested in. Problem The query I'm running takes roughly eight minutes to execute. It's not just slow for about a minute (strange enough) and then speeds up. It's very consistent once it "gets past" the three minute mark. The query I'm running is fairly simple, so I don't think it's something simple like `$sql = "SELECT * FROM table WHERE user_name='$username' AND status='$status'";` rather, it's something like `$sql = "SELECT * FROM table, table2 WHERE table.id = table2.tableID AND status='$status'";` The database that I'm using has 24 GB of RAM, so I doubt that's the problem. The database is running on

Q: Удалить весь текст с текстового файла Есть файл.txt с текстом, в котором может быть несколько пар. Всё это в одной папке, и каждый пар хранится с ключом (key). Что бы на выходе получить, нужно удалить всё текст, что находится с ключом. Как правильно это сделать?

var data = ['Name', 'Age', 'Address']; var result = JSON.stringify(data); var myFile = fs.createWriteStream('data.txt'); myFile.write(result); myFile.end();

var myFile = fs.createWriteStream('data.txt', { encoding: 'utf8' }); var data = ['Name', 'Age', 'Address']; myFile.write(JSON.stringify(data)); myFile.end();
