

Video Backup Fusions is a simple, yet powerful software application which was designed specifically in order to help you download video files from YouTube, DailyMotion and MyVideo, as well as create backups for the ones you have stored there, using one of the many built-in presets. Clear-cut interface The installation process is uneventful and takes you to a simple and intuitive UI, as it encompasses several shortcut buttons, a few drop-down menus and a panel so as to display details. It becomes clear it can be used by anybody, regardless of their previous experience with computers. Great performance This software utility presents quite a long list of presets you can use, so as to save videos to your hard drive. To be more precise, you can save clips as MP4, WEBM, FLV or 3GP file types, with different resolutions, audio channels, bit rates and so on. During the download process, the CPU and memory levels remain at a relatively low level, which means that the system's performance will not be affected in any way. Many useful options This program enables you to search for videos on the aforementioned websites, according to users, as well as specified keywords. Aside from that, it is possible to add bookmarks to items, display logs in the main window, as well as preview downloaded items, copy their URL to the Clipboard and remove or clear them. It is also possible to view a list of all the users you have searched for, and export them to the hard drive as a TXT file. The language, number of maximum simultaneous downloads and row height are subject for change and you can also customize the tool's aspect. Conclusion Taking all of this into consideration, we can safely say Video Backup Fusions is an efficient piece of software, with a good response time, an intuitive interface and enough option to tinker with. Lipid droplets as the major site of fatty acid desaturation in rat brain microsomes. The effects of the phospholipid inhibitors, diisopropyl fluorophosphate (DFP) and arachidonyltrifluoromethyl ketone (ATK) on desaturases (E2 and E1) and the amount of lipid droplets (LD) in rat brain microsomes were studied. In the presence of either inhibitor, LD were present in the ER. In the absence of inhibitors, desaturases were present in the LD fraction, but no LD were present. Under all conditions, the microsomal cholesterol-to-phospholipid molar ratio was 1:2. Therefore, the differences in the amount of LD in the presence or absence of inhibitors were due to differences in the amount of phospholipid. From these data, it was concluded that LD were the major site of fatty acid desaturation in the rat brain. ADAMTS-8 (TACE) is a secreted proteinase that is secreted by breast tumor
