KEYMACRO is a password manager which helps you create and access passwords for web accounts, secure servers, sites, and other resources. The program works in the same fashion as a virtual keyboard. KEYMACRO can be configured to store your passwords as individual lines or as groups in a customizable list. You can fill in username and password fields, define categories and accounts to which you want to access, and create keys for each of them. KEYMACRO features a tabbed interface, which makes switching between categories and accounts a breeze. You can specify if a password is required, and keep the program handy by saving a file containing the passwords in a text file. KEYMACRO also comes with a hotkey feature, which lets you open the program when you press a key combination. You can map any key to do that. The list of available combinations is an on-the-fly customizable list, which lets you make as many combinations as you want. KEYMACRO supports both English and German versions. Its main feature set includes the following features: > Organize your passwords in groups and categories > Create your own virtual keyboard > Configure passwords to different categories > Keep your passwords in a text file > Hotkey support > Enable autofill > Save the encrypted file in a text file > Key file editor > Import/export of key files and passwords > Password and user list display > You can add multiple accounts > Password length limitation > Unlimited data types, decimal places, and set of passwords > 5-steps usability check > Built in reminder tool > Password validator > Password encrypted with a random combination of letters and numbers > Integrated browser extension (Firefox, Chrome, Opera) > Smart secure servers > Password unlock feature > Anti-spamming to

So here's my dilemma: I know that no matter how diligent my physical activity habits are, I'm never going to burn off one pound of fat by walking on a treadmill for an hour. I know that my mental state and the state of my metabolism are going to come into play, too. But I am not about to give up the ball, either. I still go to the gym four times a week (three days at the gym, two days at home) and on the days I don't do that, I'm still going to do my core workout at home. I'm still going to go for a brisk 30-minute walk most mornings. And I am going to get up at least an hour earlier to exercise every single day. Here are my calorie-counting goals. My Best Effort My first goal is to make a sincere effort to burn at least 500 calories a day, plus or minus 250. That's more than a pound of fat a week, which is the typical amount I lose during a week when I follow my weekly diet plan. I don't have my scale with me right now, so I'm going to take a guess on this one and aim for somewhere around 250. (That's what the daily calorie goals are, anyway.) My Intentions My second goal is to tell myself what I'm going to do every day, and then I'm going to do it. This is the same as my first goal, only I'm not going to do it at all unless my intent is in the right place. If my intent is to eat the cake and not exercise, I won't. If my intent is to eat the cake and walk around the room after the cake is gone, I will. If my intent is to eat the cake, walk around the room, and do whatever else I want, I

Logo Design Studio is a powerful solution for professional logo design. It allows you to create original and eye-catching logos in minutes. The screen was particularly good. It is bright and visible from most angles, however heat is an issue, particularly around the Windows button on the front, and on the back where the battery housing is located. My first impression after unboxing the Q702 is that it is a nice looking unit. Styling is somewhat minimalist but very effective. The tablet part, once detached, has a nice weight, and no buttons or switches are located in awkward or intrusive positions. Panthers News Panthers HC Ron Rivera on Manziel: "Football is a fun game, it's a wonderful game, but when you start to pull your hair out, throw things and hurt people...that's not going to work" Sep 21, 2013 Hines Ward Rivera on Manziel: "He's going to get coached in a lot of different ways...he can do it the right way and be respectful, he can also do it the wrong way and be disrespectful." Rivera on his job as coach: "We've been doing this for a long time, it's not going to change...when you're in a meeting room, when you're on the sideline, you're making the decisions." On the younger players: "You have to bring your intensity. You can't just show up here and be a good person. You have to be more involved. We have to teach the younger guys that football is a fun game, it's a wonderful game, but when you start to pull your hair out, throw things and hurt people, that's not going to work. You're better off being a good person and showing your teammates respect and not taking it all so seriously." On his leadership: "I have to be the guy that understands what the philosophy is and what the expectations are and what the environment is. You have to be able to put the guys in the right frame of mind. At the end of the day, you're there to support and cheer them on and guide them on the field and make sure that they understand what's going on. You're the leader of the team and you have to be able to do that." Q: How to make sure data is loaded from database when view is opened? I want to show records from database
