I have been trying the following " hidden="true" /> I have tried putting that in my top of my body. I want to place this image in the footer of the page just outside of the grid columns. The hidden attribute doesn't seem to be working. A: Keep your hidden attribute outside of the anchor tag: Then you can use CSS to hide it: input[hidden=true] { display: none; } However, it is not recommended for security reasons. It is something you'd only want to do in a hidden frame or for some types of content which doesn't show when you change your window size, etc. Not Applicable. 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to spread spectrum communications and receivers and, more particularly, to a method for receiving spread spectrum signals with a receiver that demodulates the received signal into a sequence of demodulated data symbols and a sequence of baud timing symbol, and multiplexes the demodulated data symbols in one of multiple redundant frames and baud timing symbol in one of multiple redundant frames. 2. Description of the Related Art A spread spectrum communication system is an inherently secure radio communication system, in which the information is encoded to render it nearly impossible to intercept the transmitted signal without a direct knowledge of the encoding algorithm and key. In a spread spectrum communication system, data or information is encoded and/or modulated by a pseudonoise (PN) encoded signal that is generated and transmitted within a particular bandwidth, and which is not readily identifiable by an unintended recipient as being a valid transmission, but is easily recognized by the recipient as noise. In a direct sequence spread spectrum (DSSS) system,
